"Seeing is Believing."

And a good lamp must be simple; when it is not simple it is not good. Simple, beautiful, good—these words mean much, but to see "The Rochester" will impress the truth more forcibly. All metal, tough and seamless, and made in three pieces only, it is absolutely safe and unbreakable. Like Aladdin's of old, it is indeed a "wonderful lamp," for its marvelous light is purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light and more cheerful than either.

Look for this lamp, "The Rochester." If the lamp dealer hasn't the genuine Rochester, and the style you would send to us for our new illustrated catalogue, and we will send you a lamp safely by express—your choice of over 2,000 varieties from the Largest Lamp Store in the World.

Better Not Turn Back.

If Mr. Carlisle would not forever damn his personal popularity by the Kentucky politicians, his acceptance of the treasury portfolio is an assured fact. Hope deferred maketh the heart sick, but hope blighted maketh the heart hard against the raiser and the blighter, if he be one and the same.

So sure have they become that Mr. Carlisle can if he will, and so great is their desire that he will if he may, that the aspiring politicians of senatorial proportions have risen en masse throughout Kentucky and reached forth their multitudinous hands after that already half cast off toga.

So tense is the tension, so strained the situation, that were the stalwart statesman of the limpid Licking to now draw the flipping folds of his legislative mantle about him as he turned his back on the open cabinet, the snap of the broken heart would ring on listening ears like a volley from a company of old-time riflemen.

Already the advance guard of the world's succession is concentrating at the state capital; already are being prepared the preliminaries for general debauchment of aggressive emissaries, spies, couriers and sharpshooters, throughout the state; already Cushman—a most potent factor in the prospective contest—is actively though subtly planning his campaign and deploying his men.

It may not of necessity be understood that in thus using Hon. Cushman Marcellus Clay's sobriquet so familiarly we have any thought of the root of all evil, filthy here, hard cash; but let it go, that there is an affinity not of our arranging, and the effect of which it is not our mission to counteract.

And too others are arranging for the fray, diplomacy is at play, old lines of alliances are being renewed and new ones run and communities of interests are being formed beside the breaking up of which the thawing out of the present ice gorge in the Ohio river will not be a circumstance—Lexington Commonwealth.

Printers Who Have Got Pie.

Gov. Hogg, of Texas, whose second term of office will begin next Monday, is but thirty-nine years old, but has had a remarkable and successful career. He was an orphan and the widow who cared for him put him to work on the farm when he was nine years of age. At night she gave him instructions in books, until he entered a store to learn that business, but soon left it to learn the printer's trade in a country newspaper office, and became a first-class printer. He entered politics when he was twenty-one years of age, his first office being road overseer, next constable, sheriff, county clerk, state senator and governor. He was never defeated when before the people. He is the editor and owner of the San Angelo Sentinel, one of the best county newspapers in Texas.

He is now talked of as a candidate for U. S. senator to succeed R. Q. Mills.

Indeed, printers and newspaper men seem to be in it in a gubernatorial way this year. Gov. Peck, of Wisconsin, Gov. Jones, of Alabama, Gov. Cooper, of Colorado, Gov. Hogg, of Texas, Gov. Osborn, of Wyoming, Gov. Lowelling, of Kansas, and several more, are all "prints," and good ones, too.—Chy City Chronicle.

Salaries Paid by Uncle Sam.

The salaries paid to persons in the civil service of the United States amount to $90,000,000 annually. This seems like a tremendous amount, but when it is borne in mind that this sum pays the wages of 180,000 persons it need not appall any one. The average is only $500 a year. The number of public offices has been increased 20,000 during the past few years, but the additions were chiefly postmasters, some of them receiving insignificant amounts. It ought to be added that a large proportion of the 180,000 are not exclusively employed by the government, but only put in a part of their time.

MOUNTAINS FULL OF MONEY.

The Navajo Indians Have Zealously Guarded Their Gold Fields.

Wm. H. Duncan, editor of the Terre Haute (Ind.) Mail, was connected with the government Indian agency at Ft. Defiance, A. T., for several years and is well acquainted with the gold fields along the San Juan river. He says the Indians have had knowledge of the presence of gold for many years and that a few white men have had positive knowledge of its presence for a long time.

The Navajo reservation is nearly half the size of Indiana, equally divided north and south by the boundary line between Arizona and New Mexico, and bounded on the north by the San Juan river, which follows closely the southern boundaries of Utah and Colorado. The new El Dorado is in the north east corner of Arizona and in a section of country where there are unmistakable evidences of volcanic upheavals. It is a territory held sacred by the Navajos, whose religious belief is identified with "the great fire," according to the legendary story of the eruptions in the dim past. The Indians in this part of the reservation are the most intelligent and at the same time the most dangerous of the tribe. They seldom visit the agency, which is one hundred miles to the south, and have always resented the visits of the white men. They are fine specimens of physical manhood, independent and very brave. They are held in check from going on the warpath by their wealthy possessions. They own vast flocks of sheep, a million or more head, thousands of horses, and, being expert workers in silver, have acquired wealth by the sale of the product of their handicraft. It is also known that there is a large deposit of coal and oil in this part of the reservation, one vein of coal seven feet thick having been discovered. There is also reason to believe that there is much copper in the reservation.

Three years ago a party of twenty prospectors went into the gold fields, led by an old-time miner, who had learned of the presence of gold from the Indians. Captain Wash, of the Sixth cavalry, was sent with a troop of soldiers to remove the prospectors from the reservation, but his mission proved to be of rescue before it was completed. Had he not gone to the rescue of the men there is no doubt they would have been massacred by the Indians. There are stories of courtesans, white men who went into the San Juan country who never returned and whose fate is only a matter of conjecture.

For a number of years there has been more or less talk of the schemes of influential syndicates to secure the opening of the reservation, but Mr. Duncan does not believe that what has been done recently on the reservation side of the river was with the connivance of any one in authority. He thinks it more likely that the rush into the reservation was brought about by those who have secured the best claims with the ulterior purpose of causing one of those conflicts with the Indians that always result in the removal of the red men from the coveted land.

Likely To Be Tried Again.

It was said on yesterday by a member of the house of representatives, in regard to the World's fair appropriation, the following: "If the bill passes the senate now and is signed by the governor, and I suppose it will, then it will be brought into the courts again to test the right of the legislature to appropriate money to a corporation, and I will bet that the court will decide the bill unconstitutional." So it will be tried again.—Frankfort Argus.

Under the late revenue law all boarding-house keepers who take boarders by the day are deemed tavern-keepers, and required to take out license from the county clerk. The license is $10 per year.

Take THE HERALD a year; $1.00.

The War is On.

The Frankfort Capital of the 11th inst. says: The senatorial battle has begun, and Mr. Carlisle, from his room in the Capital Hotel, hears the cries of the populace: "The king is dead; long live the king." The clans are gathering, and the hotel registers show strange names; new faces are in the lobbies, while some of them are old in the ways of politics and senatorial contests. Here and there a self-important personage can be seen with an air of solemnity about him who thinks he thinks that he knows all about it, and who, when the election has passed into the history, will assume to have directed its movements and planned its result. This sort of person causes an epidemic of that tired feeling, and if he were to go home and never come back any more the wheels of the world would continue to go around.

The candidates are not yet in evidence, but they are within calling distance, and when the bell rings they will appear on the track.

As a matter of fact, no man is yet a candidate. There is no vacancy, and it would not be the best of taste to offer for Mr. Carlisle's shoes while he still wears them. Perhaps, as this is a senatorial matter, toga would be a wiser word than shoes. The man would be crab indeed who would seek to rob another of his toga while the thermometer marks zero. But diplomacy has many devices, and he is a poor politician who cannot find a way to make known his wants.

Ex-Gov. McCrory has all the time been counted as one of the list of probable candidates, and the following letter, which was published in the Louisville Post, indicates that no mistake was made in the count:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 6, 1893.
Hon. Wm. W. Stevenson, Editor of the Kentucky Post.
My Dear Friend: It is probable that a senator will soon be elected by the members of the general assembly of Kentucky to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of one of the senators from Kentucky. I have great confidence in your judgment, and hope our friendship will excuse me for asking you to write to me on the subject. My experience as a legislator and as governor, and my eight years in congress, I hope, have equipped me for the important duties which a new senator should be required to perform immediately after his election. If a vacancy occurs, and I am a candidate I will be very grateful for your aid.

JAMES H. MCCRARY.

Hog Meat Will Be Plentiful.

A New York view of the hog shortage is thus set forth: "The statement of the Chicago packers that the hog famine is due to the spring rains is all bosh. The whole amount of it is that Phil Armour and the other usually long-headed men got nipped in a little squeeze operated by such men as Charles Wright and John Cudahy, of Chicago, and now they have not got the pork and cannot get it. The speculation in corn which was carried up so high that the farmers thought it much more profitable to market their corn than feed it to hogs, so they killed the animals and sent them to market. The result was that the summer killing increased about one million head and the winter supply is short. Then, too, the opening of foreign markets to the American hog had a great deal to do with it. Germany and France tried to force our porkers out by cutting their home prices and went under them and flooded the market. The only difference here is the increased price to consumers, as there is no speculation. New York does not speculate in provisions and lets futures, as far as they are concerned, severely alone. The supply is gradually increasing, however, and will soon be all right.

When two such distinguished citizens as Ex-governors Buckner and Knott journey to the far east to make a combined assault upon the president-elect there must be something up. The wide awake correspondents, however, have evidently not yet discovered the object of their mission, though they do tell us that those Kentuckians held a conference with the democratic chief and are returning home in pretty good humor.—Danville Advocate.

SPENCER COOPER, Editor

HAZEL GREEN, KY.: FRIDAY, Jan. 20, 1893.

Now that it is practically settled that Hon. John G. Carlisle will go into President Cleveland's cabinet as secretary of the treasury, the saloons at Frankfort are figuring on his successor in the United States senate. Among the names mentioned as likely to succeed him, we note that of Hon. W. C. P. Breckinridge, the present representative of the Ashland district in congress. Without mentioning the merits or demerits of any of the other gentlemen, we must insist that Mr. Breckinridge is the best equipped of the entire lot and Kentucky will honor herself in sending him to the senate. From Maine to Mexico he is known as the "silver-tongued orator of Kentucky," and as wide as his fame as a speaker is his popularity as a politician. Not only this, but unlike ninety-nine in every hundred of this class, he is a pure man. Col. Breckinridge is the same courteous gentleman to-day, tomorrow and always, and by his noble manner he has won the esteem of men of every class in society and political complexion in politics. He is a man in all that the word implies, and there is no deceit in him. Whether he is made the successor of Mr. Carlisle or not the people can rest assured that he will resort to no unfair means to win. He is above and beyond all such littleness.

When Cleveland as president, Col. Breckinridge could accomplish more for Kentucky than any other man who could be sent to the United States senate, and the Kentucky legislature will make a grand mistake should they fail to name him as the successor of Mr. Carlisle. It is well known that Mr. Breckinridge is already in close touch with President Cleveland, and his elevation to the United States senate would only place him a little nearer the throne of Grover's grace. Gentlemen of the legislature, be careful to cast your vote for W. C. P. Breckinridge, when the candidates from whom you must select a successor to Mr. Carlisle are all before you, and you will have done nobly by your constituents.

THE HERALD is for Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge for the United States senate against all and every one of the candidates, who have or may hereafter be announced. Since the editor of this paper was a barefoot boy he has known Col. Breckinridge, and in that long acquaintance we can truthfully say of him that we never heard ought against his good name. As a citizen his record is as clear as the noon-day sun. As a speaker none can with him compare, and as a statesman he has possibly one, and only one superior, John G. Carlisle, the gentleman whom we hope to see him succeed.

Some tricky politicians there may be who will vote against Col. Breckinridge for the United States senatorship, but all good men and true will be for him. Watch the voting and see how far we miss the mark. You will note that we come close to the bull's eye.

No man in Kentucky can write so worthily the manly gown and aside by that manly man, John G. Carlisle, as can Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge. He can fill it and it will fit him admirably.

For the Benefit of Sheriffs.
The following bill has been introduced in the senate by Mr. Hargis, read the first time, and ordered to be printed, viz:

An act for the benefit of ex-sheriffs of this commonwealth.
Be it enacted by the general assembly of the commonwealth of Kentucky: § 1. That the ex-sheriffs of this commonwealth be, and they are hereby, allowed the further sum of two years to collect their outstanding and uncollected taxes, and are allowed the same remedies and powers of redress, and shall be liable in like manner as is now provided by law in the collection of such taxes.

§ 2. This act shall not apply to taxes due more than ten years.

Be it enacted by the general assembly of this commonwealth that the ex-sheriffs of this commonwealth who will be lost to them if this act does not take effect immediately, are hereby allowed to declare in writing, and file the same with the clerk of the senate, that they do not intend to collect any taxes, and shall be liable to suit thereon as provided by law.

Compensation to Circuit Clerks.
Mr. Arnett, from the committee on criminal laws in the house, reported the following bill, which was read the first time, ordered to be read a second time on another day, and ordered printed, viz:

An act to allow compensation to circuit court clerks of this commonwealth for their services in criminal cases.
Be it enacted by the general assembly of the commonwealth of Kentucky: § 1. That circuit court clerks of this commonwealth shall be allowed and paid out of the treasury of the state of Kentucky the same fees for their services in criminal cases as they are now allowed by law for their services in civil cases; such fees shall be allowed to the circuit clerks and paid as other claims against the commonwealth.

§ 2. This act shall take effect as the law requires.

May or May Not Be So.

It is learned that the secret influence which has led the Kentucky statesman to "make the sacrifice" is the private assurance from the president-elect, through mutual friends, that all kinds of work will be done, to make Mr. Carlisle president in 1896. It is slyly hinted by the friends of Senator Carlisle that Mr. Cleveland will use the name and geographical power of his secretary of the treasury to break down the presidential hopes of Senator David B. Hill four years hence. It is conceded that Carlisle would be a much better man to defeat Hill than anyone in the east. Carlisle could get a solid south, the southwest, Ohio, Delaware, Maryland and New Jersey and much of New England. Any western democrat would stand no chance against Carlisle, who is considered sound upon the currency question, and who would cut into the east even against any man from that section. As the matter now stands, it is Carlisle for the treasury, with the understanding that he will be Cleveland's man for the presidency in 1896.—N. Y. paper.

Finance Influences Friendship.

In business false friends are like our shadow, keeping close to us while we walk in the sunshine but leaving us the instant we pass in the shade. Should the most lowly man in the city become rich, he would soon be exalted. Let the wealthy become poor and swiftly he is retired from both public and private favor to the shades of isolation. Man in our materialistic civilization, is counted as nothing, his wealth is looked at, and the sharper, the most of them finished foreigners who have emigrated to America as hazyards flying toward ruin.—Selected.

The highest salary paid by the United States is $50,000, received by the president; the first-class foreign missions are worth $17,000, justices of the supreme court receive $10,000 and cabinet officers and the vice-president $8,000 each. Only a few of the department officials receive as high as $10,000 a year.

Spencer Cooper, editor of that pretty and new paper the HAZEL GREEN HERALD wants to be master commissioner of Wolf county. His honor, Judge Bodine, could not find a more competent man for the position. Here's hoping to you, Bro. Cooper, — Owingsville Opinion.

Now is a good time to subscribe.

To solve the problem requires thought. But the simple fact is known to many—that Dr. Fanner's Golden Relief cures Consumption. It does it every time and in every case, when used before the lungs have become too far diseased. Here is a typical case: Miss Jenn, aged 39, has lost 23 pounds, cheeks have the "hottie flush," coughs and raises all the time, has just returned from the South, where she spent the winter. Did not improve. She takes 5 drops of Dr. Fanner's Golden Relief, on a small lump of sugar, once in 2 hours. Improvement begins at once. In 2 weeks she has gained 10 pounds. In 6 weeks she weighs 130 and is cured. This remedy is a SPECIFIC IN INFLAMMATION. No inflammation, no pneumonia, no consumption. That it cures a long list of ailments from a common cold throat, to a grave bronchitis, asthma and consumption, from a toothache to a grave neuritis, from a headache to a grave rheumatism and from summer complaint to a grave dysentery, cholera or flux. This wide range of application has sometimes unjustly caused it to be dubbed a "cure-all." But it isn't. It cures every disease, and that is its greatness. Inflammation cannot exist in its presence—and that is the problem.—One takes one-fourth dose four or five times. It never disappoints. Contains no opiates, narcotics or mineral poisons. Perfectly safe. Money refunded if satisfaction not given. Take home a bottle to-day.

Dora, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Swango, is in a serious condition from a swollen arm. Sometime ago she burned her little finger, contracted cold in the place, and now it is thought pneumonia has set up. Her arm is swollen out of all proportion, and she suffers much but everything is being done to alleviate the pain that is so suggested and she is resting easier.

We are informed that Spencer Cooper, editor of the HAZEL GREEN HERALD, is a candidate for master commissioner of Wolfe county. We hope he will get the place if he wants it. We are not personally acquainted with him, but we know from his course in the last campaign that he is a good democrat, and we believe he will do his duty faithfully.—Mountain Sentinel.

NEWS OF NEIGHBOR COUNTIES.

ST. HELENS, TENN. SATURDAY.

ST. HELENS, TENN. COUNTY, JAN. 15. Circuit court adjourned last Thursday. The grand jury returned sixty-five indictments. Billard Galsford was sentenced to two years in state prison for the killing of Steve Moore, some time ago. Four indictments were made for murder, and three tried and convicted.

Quite a number of guests partook of an elegant dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. McGuire, at this place. Hon. J. B. McGuire, of Irvine, was among the guests present. It was the birthday of the host's mother, Mrs. Evelyn McGuire. She was 78 years old on that day.

John Staniford, who was stabled some time ago, near this place by Rufus Hill, died last Wednesday night. The grand jury found an indictment of murder in the first degree. Hill is yet at large.

Misses Lulu Kash and Leann Combs, of Hazel Green, spent last Sunday in our midst en route home from an extended visit to Jackson.

Miss Florence Hurst, of Mt. Sterling, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Fannie Snowden, of this place.

H. B. McGuire has purchased the farm that Ibram McGuire lives on near this place.

David Pryse, of Beattyville, was in our midst last Sunday.

EZEL EVOLUTIONS.

EZEL, Morgan county, Jan. 17.—There will be two total eclipses this year. One of the sun April 16th, not visible in the United States; the other of the republican party March 4th, visible to a large portion of the world. The peoples party, poor little thing, never shined enough for an eclipse to affect it. It has been floating about in space trying to get the satellite but could never get enough attraction to cause it to revolve.

The school taught at this place by W. H. Delank closed last Wednesday with a splendid entertainment at night.

News items are scarce, perhaps froze up, so we may expect an over production when a thaw comes.

B. P. Kash, whose sickness we mentioned recently, is improving nicely.

Born—On the 7th, to the wife of Lee Carr, twin boys.

Investigation showed that the Lee City letter promised publication was only a riddle.

STATE NEWS.

A colored pharmacist has registered in Daviess county.

Ex-Gov. Lieut. Gov. Hindman is an applicant for pension agent at Louisville.

A. E. Stevenson, vice-president-elect, and his law partner, James S. Ewing, of Birmingham, Ills., were in Louisville Monday.

The case of Theodore Schwartz, charged with embezzlement, was called in the Shelby circuit court and passed to the May term.

Geo. Wells shot and killed his father, Ben Wells, at Gravel Switch, Marion county, because the old man would not give him a drink of whisky.

Geo. Ward, the Clay county negro who killed Geo. Wells, was arrested at Junction City, is having his third trial for the crime this week in Danville.

Some Stanford and Danville people are agitating a scheme for a railroad to join these two towns, and to run freight excursions in times of coal famine.

The Tennessee river is frozen over at Paducah, and skaters are crossing and recrossing, the first time anything of the kind has occurred in fifteen years.

Owsley county magistrates have allowed the school superintendent $300 as salary for the year 1892, which is said to be the largest salary ever paid to an official in that county.

The steamer Mississippi, the flagship of the Mississippi river improvement company, was taken to the waters edge Monday. She belonged to the government and was valued at $45,000.

The Hickman Courier says: "The people of Kentucky adopted the new constitution by the two majority. A vote today would reject a call for a constitutional convention by an equal majority."

Joe Raleigh, a Breathitt county brute, who shot and killed a fourteen year old boy, has been caught and taken to Winchester for safe keeping. There seems to be a fine opening for a hanging at Jackson.

The churches at Versailles on Sunday each took up a collection for poor, and quite a sum was realized, with which food and fuel and taken to Winchester for safe keeping. There seems to be a fine opening for a hanging at Jackson.

In the Crittendon county district the contest for place in the next legislature is in full swing. S. O. Nunn and P. F. Stephens are candidates for senate and J. W. Skelton for the house, with numerous others feeling around.

The Lancaster Record-Homestead suggests that the turkey business in central Kentucky is too much to rest closer attention in breeding for weight. We note, as an evidence of what can be accomplished in this line, a flock of 24 head, raised in Anderson county, that weighed 441 pounds gross. A yearling gobbler tipped the beam at 37 lbs. gross, and 31 net.

tient manners do much to oil the machinery of life at home and in the community. It costs little effort to say "I thank you" and "If you please." To acknowledge every kindness as a favor worth appreciation; but were it otherwise, effort in this direction would be well repaid. Especially in our intercourse with children or with the aged, with those who are in any way at a disadvantage as compared with ourselves, should we be careful to exercise a cordial politeness. If this be the manner of our outlook on the world, it will influence our manners to all whom we meet. Harper's Bazar.

Not only would it leave Missouri and all of the remainder of the United States high and dry, but would probably drain the gulf of Mexico and leave a gravel and shell-paved path from the mouth of the Mississippi to Cuba and Louisiana. A few "dry" hours would pass and then the whole land would again be inundated, only to be soon abandoned.

The subject of Dr. Talmage's sermon Sunday was "Eliphaz on the rock," the text selected being II. Samuel, xxi. 10: "And Eliphaz, the daughter of Ahith, took sackcloth and spread it for her upon the rock, from the beginning of the harvest until water dropped." The sermon was a masterpiece, and neither the birds of the air rest upon any day, nor the beasts of the field by night.

Tragedy that beat anything Shaltespenian or Victor Hugolian. After returning from the Holy Land I briefly touched upon it, but I must have a whole sermon for that scene.

The explosion and flash of gunpowder have driven nearly all the beasts to the rear of the press, and now the shriek of the locomotive whistle which is daily heard at Jerusalem will for many miles around clear the air of cruel elms and beeches. But in the heart of the great republic were populous with multitudes of Jackals and Hous. Seven sons of Saul had been crucified on a hill. Rhipah had been crucified on a tree. Five of the boys. What had those boys done that they should be crucified? Nothing except to have a bad father and a good mother. The other two boys were dead, why not take them from the gibbets, too. They are sentenced to hang there. So Ruzpah takes the sackcloth, a rough shawl with which in mourning for her dead she had wrapped herself, and spreads that sackcloth upon the rocks near the gibbets, and gets the part of a sentinel watching and defending the dead.

Yet every other tunnel is relieved, and after being on guard for a few hours some one else takes his place. But Elreph is on guard both day and night and for half a year. One hundred and eighty days and nights of constant vigilance, and he has never had to stand that! Ah! do you not know that a mother can stand anything?

Oh! if she might be allowed to hallow a place in the side of the hill and lay the bodies of her children to quiet rest!—
O might and might again, that she might find for their Christian sepulture! Oh! if she might take them from the gibbet of disgrace and carry them still to the place of their fathers' sepulture, and then lie beside them in the last long sleep! Exhausted nature ever and anon falls into slumber. But in a moment she breaks the slumber, and then she rises up, she looks up, she is cruel and leaps up on the rock shouting at wild beasts glaring from the thicket and at voracious fowls wheeling in the air. She looks up, she looks up, she reaches David and he comes forth to hide the ledeucency. The corpses had been chained to the trees. The chains are unloosed with horrid clank and the bodies are hurled down. The seven are buried. And the story ends.

But it hardly comes before you only to

 That is what makes dissipation and

It reverberates in other times. It may skip one generation, but it is said to come up in the third generation, as is suggested in the ten commandments which say: "Visiting the iniquities of the father upon the children unto the third and fourth generation." The same principle is at work in the life of every man.

generation." "Mind you, it says and says again, 'the second generation shall be born to the first, the third to the second, the fourth to the third.' That accounts for what you sometimes see—very good parents with very bad children. Go far enough back in the ancestral line and you find the source of all the trouble. The influence of the fathers upon the children upon the third and fourth generation." "If when Saul died, the consequences of his

Alas, not for the dead, but for the living. In Jerusalem and see the ghastly burdens of those seven gibbets, and the waning and wasted Ruzhali watching them. Go to-day through the streets of Jerusalem, and you will find that nine out of ten had drunken or vicious parents. Yes, day by day on the streets of Jerusalem you find men and women wrecked of evil parentage. They are mernl corpses. Like the seven sons of Saul, though dead, unburiel. Alas for Ruzhali, who, not for six months, but for years, has been watching them. She can not keep the vultures and jackals off.

Furthermore, this strange incident in the Bible story shows that attractiveness of a person is not always in proportion to his or her position or ability. It is not always the person in a high position who is the most attractive. It is not always the person who is the most powerful who is the most attractive. It is not always the person who is the most beautiful who is the most attractive. It is not always the person who is the most intelligent who is the most attractive. It is not always the person who is the most successful who is the most attractive. It is not always the person who is the most powerful who is the most attractive. It is not always the person who is the most beautiful who is the most attractive. It is not always the person who is the most intelligent who is the most attractive. I saw one in a desolate home. Her frail, creased companion had pined away. Her venerable ancestry she had come down to this. The cruse of oil was empty and the last candle gone out. Her aged flesh was patched with fragments of antique silk that she had worn on the bright marriage day. Content in God she had a strong heart. With her eyelids she saw the angels in the heavens were filled with thorough thieftakers and the thickets gnashed with raging. Allah watched faithfully day after day and year after year, and wold an ornament by her God-strengthened arm.

The vessel parted. Amid the whirl and the darkness all were lost to each. These clung to the wreck on each. Sleeping that night on Long Point Lighthouse was a girl of gentle spirit and comely countenance. As the morning dawns I see that girl standing and the spray and tumult of contending elements, looking through a glass at the wreck and the nine wretched sufferers. She proposes to her father to take boat and put out across the Gulf sea to rescue them. The father replies: "It can not be done. Just as the tumbling snrl." But she persisted, and with her father bonds into the boat. Though never accustomed to riding the oar, she takes one and helps the other. Steady now! Pull away! Pull away!

The men tossed up the boat as though there were a bubble, and amid the foam and the wrath of the sea the wreck was hatched, the exhausted people poked up and saved. Human societies tendered their thanks. Wealth poured into the lap of the poor girl. Visitors from all hands came to look at her sweet face, and then, soon after, she launched forth into a dark sea and death was the only reward, drink and duchesses and might were sent down in tears to Aboukir.

Again, the scene of the text impresses upon us the strength of maternal attachment. Not many men would have had courage or endurance for the awful mission of Ruzpah. To dare the rage of wild beasts, and sit from May to October unsheltered, and to watch the corpses of unburied children was work that nothing but the maternal heart could have accomplished. It needed more strength than to stand before open batteries or to walk calmly the deck of a foundering planner, he has no emotion so completely unselfish as maternal affection. Confidently he expects the return of many labors and attentions. Filial love expresses parental care or is helped by the memory of past watchfulness. But the mother's affection is not so dependent on the independent of the past and future. It is, of all emotions, the purest. The child has done nothing in the past to earn kindness, and in the future it may grow up to maltreat its parent; but still from the mother's heart flows a love that is consumable affection. Abuse can not offend it, neglect can not chill it, time can not efface it, death can not destroy it. For harsh words it has gentle cheering, for the blow it has beneficent mending, for neglect it has diligent watching. It weeps at the prison door over the incarcerated prodigal and pleads for pardon at the governor's seat, and is forced away by compulsion from the freedom which it has so long struggled of the gallows. Other loves die, but this burns on without extinguishment, as a glow-stick, until night you may see a single star, one of those plectils, with gleaming bayonet, and the gallows, the guillotine, the guillotine. The martyrdom of Spanish women when the earthquake at Messina occurred, was carried out unselfishly from the falling houses. On coming to her senses she found that her infant had not been killed, and she saved it. Illustration of 10,000 mothers who in as many different ways have sacrificed themselves for their children.

Theology, which may be defined as the science which treats of the existence, attributes, and character of God, is an unending study. But of one thing it is not absolute truth, but only a truth, and that is, that we can know God through the standpoint, the disposition, and the nature of the theologian. To us, even the Bible we find this same idea of God prevailing: "Jah's idea of God is the same as the idea of the Father, but different from both." Abraham had one conception, and Mary Magdalene had another. How can a theologian's idea of God be the truth, when he knows from the Scriptures that God is omnipotent and omniscient, all-powerful, all-wise and all-goodness, and the Father agrees with the conception of a flesh-chopper with a mind like the tentennere lot of fallow ground? Certainly, the only moment when we can say that we are correct in our conception of God are upon the heights and depths of the Divine nature must necessarily be conditioned by the amount of

Let us continue to study theology, but let us also cultivate a becoming modesty. Heresy is only somebody else's orthodoxy. We may reasonably agree to disagree in theology. Cosmopolitan America. "Tis a historical error to regard it as a transplanted England. We are rather a transatlantic Europe, Asia and Africa. All the tongues that Babel cleft our human speech into jangle along our sidewalks. We have the strains of the wide world in our blood and the traditions and customs of the globe in our minds and habits.

Two great truths will do it, viz.: the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. If we have one common parentage and are brethren with a common destiny, there is no room for dissension and dispersion. We must come together and keep together on this broad, all-inclusive platform. Diversity only illustrates and fructifies such unity—the unity, not of likeness, but of love and good will.—St. John's Republic.
